

Annexe 1 : le texte lu (première lecture sans annotation)

“The first question which you will ask, and which I must try to answer, is this: 'What is the use of climbing Mount Everest?' and my answer must at once be, 'It is no use. There is not the slightest prospect of any gain whatsoever. Oh, we may learn a little about the behaviour of the human body at high altitudes, and possibly medical men may turn our observation to some account for the purposes of aviation. But otherwise nothing will come of it. We shall not bring back a single bit of gold or silver, not a gem, nor any coal or iron. We shall not find a single foot of earth that can be planted with crops to raise food. So it is no use. If you cannot understand that there is something in man which responds to the challenge of this mountain and goes out to meet it, that the struggle is the struggle of life itself upward and forever upward, then you won't see why we go. What we get from this adventure is just sheer joy. And joy, after all, is the end of life. We don't live to eat and make money. We eat and make money to be able to live. That is what life means and what life is for.”

— George Mallory, Climbing Everest: The Complete Writings of George Mallory.

Annexe 2 : le texte lu (annoté pour la deuxième lecture)

- End of tone unit (TU) | or pause ||
- Primary stressed syllable (beat): blue larger text
- Reduced syllable (vowel only or syllabic /l/ or /n/): orange smaller text
- Nuclear (sentence) stress (whole word) : underlined
- Intonation (low fall, rise-fall, low rise) indicated by contour lines

The first question which you will ask, | and which I must try to answer, | is this: || 'What is the use of climbing Mount Everest?' || and my answer must at once be, | 'It is no use. || 'There is not the slightest prospect of any gain whatsoever. || Oh, we may learn a little about the behaviour of the human body at high altitudes, | and possibly medical men may turn our observation to some account for the purposes of aviation. | But otherwise nothing will come of it. || We shall not bring back a single bit of gold or silver, | not a gem, | We shall not find a single foot of earth that can be planted with crops to raise food. | So it is no use. || If you cannot understand that there is something in man which responds to the challenge of this mountain and goes out to meet it, | that the struggle is the struggle of life itself upward and forever upward, | then you won't see why we go. || What we get from this adventure is just sheer joy. | And joy, || after all, | is the end of life. || We don't live to eat and make money. | We eat and make money to be able to live. || That is what life means and what life is for.” ||